Control Risks Taps Reveal-Brainspace to Bolster its Suite of Analytics, AI and Machine Learning Capabilities

LONDON, CHICAGO (April 27, 2022) – Control Risks, the specialist risk consultancy, today announced it is expanding its technology offering with Reveal, the global provider of the leading AI-powered eDiscovery and investigations platform. Reveal uses adaptive AI, behavioral analysis, and pre-trained AI model libraries to help uncover connections and patterns buried in large volumes of unstructured data.

“Corporate legal and compliance teams, and their outside counsel, are looking to technology to better understand data, reduce risks and costs, and extract key insights faster across an ever-increasing volume and variety of data. We look forward to leveraging Reveal’s data visualization, AI and machine learning functionality to drive innovation with our clients,” said Brad Kolacinski, Partner, Control Risks.

Control Risks will leverage the platform globally to unlock intelligence that will help clients mitigate risks across a range of areas including litigation, investigations, compliance, ethics, fraud, human resources, privacy and security.

“We work with clients and their counsel on large, complex, cross-border forensics and investigations engagements. It is no secret that AI, ML and analytics are now required tools in matters where we need to sift through enormous quantities of data and deliver insights to clients efficiently,” says Torsten Duwenhorst, Partner, Control Risks. “Offering the full range of Reveal’s capabilities globally will benefit our clients enormously.”

“As we continue to expand the depth and breadth of Reveal’s marketplace offerings, we are excited to partner with Control Risks, a demonstrated leader in security, compliance and organizational resilience – offerings that are more critical now than ever,” said Wendell Jisa, Reveal’s CEO. “By taking full advantage of Reveal’s powerful platform, Control Risks now has access to the industry’s leading SaaS-based, AI-powered technology stack, helping them and their clients solve their most complex problems with greater intelligence.”
